

DRIFT

(how a jelly finds its transparent partner in a transparent sea)

She opens her mouth
to receive him. She

grazes her own face with a barb. To know

there would be release at that moment, she opens her mouth for life. In that moment, with no brain,

sometimes she senses he is releasing, and she consumes to consume, or creates pods or medusas, released into the low-light sea, and continues with currents to a next.

She opens her mouth
to receive him. She

grazes his face with her barb. To feel there would be a lesson there, release in a moment, she opens for life. In that moment, with no brain, sometimes eyes, she senses his releasing, she consumes to consume, opening her mouth to receive him. She insists he swallow, too.

BRUNA MORI